mob of fifty masked men marched to the jail and called Sheriff Murdock to the jail and called Sheriff Murdock to the door.

As soon as the Sheriff opened the door he was overpowered by the masked men, who placed pistols to his head, and conducting him to the door of the cell occupied by Rose, he was commanded to unlock it. The Sheriff entreated his captors to desist, but to no purpose, and he was finally compelled to unlock the cell door under threats that the mob would have the man they sought even if they had to pull the jail down.

The Court will ask a Judge from some other district to sit with Justices Brown.

Every approach to the jail and courtuse was carefully guarded by armed and Dykman, who have thus far had members of the mob. Everything was done in a quiet, orderly manner. After securing the prisoner, the mob marched east to a railroad bridge. In the mean line word had reached the citizens of the town generally, and a crowd of fully a thousand people gathered at the bridge to see the lynching of the murderer. A rope was placed around the victim's neck, and as this was being done one of the mob said to Rose: "Let me take off your glasses," referring to the spectacles worn by the doomed man, "Yes," said Rose, "I shall never need them again, I suppose there is no use to talk; you are out here to hang me. I should have liked to have had a trial by law. I hope God will have mercy on my soil."

law. I hope God will have mercy on my soul."
His hands and feet were then tied and he was given a shove off the bridge, falling about ten feet. His neck was broken and death was almost instantaneous. The lynchers then disappeared, leaving his body dangling between the bridge and the waters of Cottonwood River, where it remained until 9 o'clock Sunday morning, when the Coroner held an inquest. The verdict was "death by hanging by parties unknown." The general verdict lere is that the lynching was justifiable, and it is understood that the men who did the work included some of the best citizens of Cottonwood Falls.

PLAYED INSANE TO ESCAPE.

Indiana Convict Proves Too Shrewd

The story of a sensational escape from the Indiana prison, south, has just leaked out. Henry Koch was sent down from Washington, Daviess County, March 23, 1893, to serve three years for grand larceny. On his arrival at the penitentiary he was assigned to the foundry. Koch always kept up with his task, but ten days ago began to not very strangely and showed symptoms of insanity, growing apparently worse. On one occasion he said to the prisoners that he had an egg in his from Washington, Daviess County, March 23, 1893, to serve three years for grand harceny. On his arrival at the penitentiary he was assigned to the foundry. Koch always kept up with his task, but ten days ago began to act very strangely and showed symptoms of insanity, growing apparently worse. On one occasion he said to the prisoners that he had an egg in his head.

head. To fortify his assertion Koch beat his cranium against the foundry wall for the purpose, as he expressed it, of opening his head and getting the egg out. Ing his head and getting the egg out. This and other queer actions convinced Warden Patton and Deputy Howard that Koch was insane, and he was sent to the insane ward. Dr. Peyton, of the prison, was called and examined Koch, but pronounced him sane. The doctor so informed the officials and recommended that he be sent back to the foundry.

Warden Patten thought differently and ordered that Koch remain in the insane ward. The latter is box-shaped, eight feet square, and is located on the floor of one of the shops. In some manner Koch procured a piece of band saw, with which he sawed a hole in the roof of his quarters large enough for him to crawl through. A few minutes him to crawl through. A few minutes later Koch was in the yard. He found a pick-axe and tunnelled a hole under the board fence, through which he crawled to liberty. He has not been seen or heard of since.
